

From the New York Times I take the following survey on nationwide public relief, presenting a new and encouraging outlook.

Twelve million persons, or one-thirteenth of the nation are receiving a monthly income payment through governmental sources other than salaries as Federal employees. Four per cent of our population, or 5,500,000, are needy persons getting public assistance.

Despite the rise in public assistance rolls since the end of the war and the increase of 19,000,000 in population since 1940, the country is now helping fewer needy persons than ten years ago. It is also spending less money for each needy person than a decade ago, even taking into account the decreased purchasing power of the dollar.

Today's welfare news lies in a significant change that began last January. Public assistance recipients have dropped from 6,000,000 to 5,500,000 while those receiving benefits under the Federal old age and survivors insurance increased by 1,000,000.

If present favorable economic conditions continue, this may result in a changing order of welfare. It will transfer thousands of needy from public assistance, which on the whole is supported out of general revenues, to the social insurance, in which each one contributes toward his benefits.

These are among the facts and figures developed in a study of national welfare conducted by the New York Times, utilizing the services of its correspondents in every state and using the latest nationwide statistics supplied by the Federal Security Agency.

The first of the series of four articles by Lucy Freeman began in the November 4 issue of The Times. They deal with the pattern of aid programs in the states, the effect of governmental help on private charity agencies, and the trends found in public aid in the nationwide study of the field.

Those eligible for old age and survivors insurance increased so much during the last year because of the 1950 amendments to the Social Security Act. It is expected that by this December another 350,000 will be receiving retirement benefits.

The rate is expected to grow even more rapidly in 1952 when thousands of workers who were nearing 65 at the time of the 1950 amendments will have worked the necessary six calendar quarters to qualify for the benefits.

Grand Jury Near End of RFC Probe

Washington Nov. 13 (AP)—A federal grand jury was authoritatively described today as nearing the end of its long investigation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (RFC), big government lending agency.

An official source who declined to be named told a reporter the grand jury probably will wind up its work "within a few weeks now." He gave no hint as to what it might do.

The panel has the options of (A) returning indictments, (B) declining to indict, or (C) filing a progress report to serve as the basis of further investigation by it or a successor grand jury.

Two senate members had raised questions in recent weeks concerning progress of the eight-month-old study. Senator Capehart (R-Ind.), a member of the banking subcommittee, wrote the justice department for a progress report.

Senator Nixon (R-Calif.), a member of the special senate investigations subcommittee which also submitted some information to the grand jury, announced last week he plans to take up the matter of grand jury speed when congress convenes in January if there has been no report by that date. He is U. S. district attorney's office, in its only official comment, has said the group is at work.

The Fulbright subcommittee touched off the inquiry by sending the justice department copies of testimony it had taken in looking into the circumstances behind a variety of RFC loans. Fulbright, Capehart and Senator Tobey (R-NH) contended some of the testimony seemed so conflicting they believed perjury had been committed. They also suggested that the grand jury look into the income taxes paid by some of those mentioned.

In its report to the senate the subcommittee had named E. Merl Young, husband of a White House stenographer and a former RFC employee; Donald S. Dawson, an aide to President Truman; Joseph H. Rosenbaum, Washington lawyer; and Rex Jacobs, Detroit industrialist, as persons of unusual influence in RFC affairs.

A chart filed as part of the report drew a connecting line between the names of Dawson and Walter L. Dunham, an RFC director, and labeled this line "subversive."

Young, Dawson, Rosenbaum, Jacobs, and the RFC officials all swore they had done no wrong.

Cincinnati, Nov. 13 (AP)—Mike McGee, real estate editor of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, last night was named president of the National Association of Real Estate Editors. He succeeds Lee Cooper of the New York Times.

W. K. Lemley Certified by Commissioners

Hempstead's election commissioners met today and certified W. K. Lemley as the winner of the Municipal Judge's race.

Mr. Lemley received 71 votes as a write-in candidate for the office while John P. Vesey who was certified as the democratic nominee received 64 votes.

Action by the commissioners followed a dispute in which incumbent judge W. K. Lemley contended he was elected for a four year term in 1949 and that he had two more years to serve. Mr. Vesey based his right to run for the office on a legislative act passed by the last general assembly.

Other city officials declared elected:
Hope - Mayor, John L. Wilson, Jr., treasurer, Charles Reynerson, and Aldermen, C. W. Tarpley, Howard Byers, Jessie Brown and H. C. Murphy.

Oakhaven - Mayor, Jess M. Davis, Recorder, Paul H. Jones; Aldermen, Edward Aslin, Lyle McMahon, S. A. Westbrook and J. C. Atchley.

Blevins - Mayor, J. I. Whitfield; Recorder, M. D. Tippit, treasurer, P. C. Stephensons; Aldermen, J. R. Foster, L. J. Brown, Lee Huskey and N. P. Nesbitt.

McCaskey - Mayor, J. O. Harris, Recorder, Chester McCaskey, Marshall, H. L. Rhodes and Aldermen, R. G. Shuffield, John Gaines, Mearl A. Pickett, M. M. Scott and Cloyd Bittick.

Washington - Mayor, Thomas G. Haynes, Recorder, W. H. Etter, and Aldermen, Mary Catts, Henry Saunders, S. Duddy and R. L. Levins.

Election commissioners making the official count were, Dorsey McRae Jr., Mrs. Chloia City and J. A. Davis.

Burglars Enter Another Driveway East on 67

A driveway, about 3 miles East on Highway 67, was entered and two machines robbed of an undetermined amount, State Police reported here today.

The drive-in is operated by E. L. Briggs and H. E. Clevenger. The burglars broke a glass in a window to gain entrance to the building. The music machine may have contained about $28 but there was no way of determining the amount in the cigarette machine.

State police also reported a break-in at an Emmet service station last night and from Lewisville comes word of three service stations and hardware store burglaries.

Only last week two other places were robbed here - Brookwood school and King's Driveway. The thieves netted about $45.

Rev. Galloway Discusses Trip to Europe

Members of the Lions Club in a regular meeting yesterday heard the Rev. E. D. Galloway, a recent visitor to Europe, tell about his trip.

The Rev. Mr. Galloway said the people of Europe were much less worried over the threat of Communism than here in America. He said that regardless of what Americans thought of socialism, it served a definite need in England.

Visitors included Foy Hammons, Joe Hankins, Coach Joe Ensminger, was received into the club.

The group also discussed plans and named committees for distribution of Christmas gifts to the needy.

Bob Turner and Pess Thornton have charge of next week's program.

B. D. Mitchell Succumbs at Columbus

Benjamin D. Mitchell, aged 61, died early today at his home at Columbus. He was a member of the Baptist Church and of Columbus Masonic Lodge No. 282.

He is survived by four sons, Davis and Taylor of Columbus, John of Houston and Dewey Mitchell of Nashville, a daughter, Mrs. W. A. Abbott of Fulton.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Columbus Baptist Church.

Firemen Put Out Grass Fire

Firemen were called to the end of South Main street this morning to put out a grass fire at the Eversmeyer home. Again firemen cautioned residents not to burn trash near grass, especially on a windy day.

14 Deer Tagged First Day in Hempstead

The Game and Fish Commission reported today that 14 deer were tagged in Hempstead county yesterday, the opening day of the season.

Others who bagged deer include, J. C. Rowland of Camden, who killed one over in Nevada county; L. J. Bryson of Prescott downed a six-pointer; Joel D. Davis of McCaskey killed an 8 point buck.

Sgt. Warren Short, on his first hunt, got an 8-pointer near Columbus as did John Keck of Hope and in the Bridge Creek region Dorsey McRae, Jr., and Jack Lowe both got spike bucks.

By The Associated Press
Arkansas deer hunters, armed with reports of opening day successes, moved into the woods anew Tuesday - the second day of the state's first half of the 1951 two-week shooting season.

There were two deaths in hunting accidents to mark the six-day shooting period for Arkansas big-game season.

Orville Blake, 43, of Scotland (Van Buren county), Ark., was shot in the chest by a rifle that, authorities said, was fired by his nephew, Ed Blake, 27, of El Dorado, Ark., Deputy Prosecutor Carroll W. Johnson said the accident occurred in Van Buren county when young Blake apparently mistook his uncle for a deer.

Billie Threet, 23, of Lead Hill (Boone county), Ark., was wounded fatally by his own gun. He had propped the gun against a tree while examining a deer he had just killed. When he went to reach for the gun it apparently discharged accidentally. He was hit in the chest.

There were reports of other hunters being wounded in camp and hunting expedition accidents.

Teen-age hunters had a field day in the Izard county hunting area. At least five youngsters reported kills on opening day.

One of the many deer killed by Pine Bluff hunters was a 300-pound plus, eight-point buck bagged by Eldon Crabtree. He knocked the huge buck over with one shot from a 20-gauge shotgun.

The first kill reported near Pine Bluff was a five-point buck slain by Jimmy Townsend, 17, student manager of the Pine Bluff High school football team who received a day off from classes for the team's 21-19 victory over Little Rock last Friday night.

Game wardens at Melbourne reported 13 deer killed in that area and there were reports of 10 other deer last Friday night.

Taking top honors was a 15-year-old Winford Tyree, an eighth-grader at Salem, Ark., who took time-out from his studies to get in a day's hunting. Young Tyree killed a 16-point, 150 pound buck with four shots from his bolt-action 22 caliber rifle.

Dean Johnson, 19, of Cave City, Ark., killed an eight-point, 150 pounder as he had started for an old shack in the woods to escape the rain. He sighted the big buck on the porch of the structure. And he caught it down with his 22 rifle to kill the deer.

Tom Williams of Melbourne had a harrowing experience before he killed his third deer in as many seasons. Williams wounded a 160-pound, 11 point buck with one bullet from his 300 savage rifle but the deer turned and charged. His second shot dropped the buck only 15 feet away.

Here are other hunters who got their limit of one buck on opening day:

Milford Davis, 16, of Trumann, Ark., a 200 pound, eight-point buck in Izard county.

Sam Rosse, 16, also of Trumann, a 100-pound three point buck in the same area.

The Rev. D. Foreman, president of the Antioch Baptist church, Little Rock, and president of the Baptist seminary, a five-pointer in Grant county.

Elza Keathley, a newcomer to the Conway, Ark., police force, was credited with being the first Faulkner county hunter to kill a deer on opening day. He got a four-point buck on Petit Jean mountain about 7 a. m.

John Wilson of Batesville, Ark., brought in Independence county's first kill. He got his 124-pound, five-point buck at 6:50 a. m. on Brock mountain.

James E. Mullins of Camden, an eight point buck near Bragg lake in Ouachita county about 8 a. m.

Camden Postmaster Ritchie Morgan brought down a 10-point buck at Keystone camp in Calhoun county.

T. W. McCoy also of Camden didn't get his deer on opening day but he had a prize anyway.

McCoy killed a 30-pound Bobcat while hunting near Holly Springs.

The Art of Squelching All Hecklers Gracefully Is a Must in the Show Business

By HAL BOYLE
New York (AP)—To get ahead in show business today you have to develop the art of squelching hecklers gracefully.

For hecklers hang out in the swank night clubs as well as the rafters of Madison Square Garden. "They fall into two broad types — people who try to get into the act deliberately, and those who unconsciously slow up the show," said Margaret Phelan, a red-haired Texas lass who has become one of America's top supper club singers.

Sometimes performers have a wild desire to go to work on bawdy hecklers with a baseball bat. "They do keep a stock collection of cutting deep freeze remarks handy to chill noisy showoffs. The oldest standby: 'Why don't you just turn yourself into a hoop and roll away?'"

But Maggie prefers generally to rely on a pretty smile and a friendly rebuke that leaves no sting. "You don't want to make them mad," she said. "You just want to make them aware they are disturbing others — and holding up the show. The audience doesn't like it either, if an entertainer embarrasses a heckler too much, unless he is completely out of hand."

Surprisingly, Miss Phelan says there are just about as many women hecklers as men.

But it is much harder to handle a woman heckler," she said, "because she often is doing it deliberately."

Here are seven types of deliberate and unconscious night club hecklers she has catalogued:

1. The lost soul — "He wanders from chair to chair, table to table, all through the performance."

2. The fellows with determined looks who keep walking in and out of the spotlight, holding their hands to their foreheads like Indian scouts — "They are looking for the men's room."

3. The silverware droppers, ice-cream-slickers, and the swizzle-stick-against-the-glass rhythmic keepers — "whether they are dropping a fork or trying to keep time, they are always a half beat off."

4. The frustrated carousers — "They want to make a duct of your solo. Thank heaven, there aren't many of these."

5. The would-be Milton Berks — "They make loud wisecracks, probably hoping a television producer in the audience will hear them and hire them. But I never heard of anybody getting a job that way."

6. The lady conversationalists — "They try to talk about the music because they want to be the life of their party. But if they'd wait until the show was over, they'd have more to talk about — when they'll need some conversation."

7. The elderly kittenish romances with a wink. "I'm afraid to do it by kissing them on their bald heads — there's so much heart trouble around these days."

Recognize your type? Maggie said she found the least heck-

Governors Irked Over Rayburn's Plea for Unity

Hot Springs, Nov. 13 (AP)—Gov. James E. Byrnes of South Carolina declared today the South owes its loyalty to no political party or candidate in next year's presidential election.

The governor told a news conference he is opposed to the renomination of President Truman and would support either Sen. Richard Russell (D-Ga.) or Sen. Harry Byrd (D-Va.) for the presidency.

He added that "true Americans" owe their loyalty to their country rather than to any political party or leader.

And he made it clear he believes a southern revolt against Truman should not be judged on any basis of political loyalty.

Byrnes' statements were in direct answer to a plea from House Speaker Sam Rayburn for Southern Democrats to remain loyal to the Democratic nominee next year regardless of who he might be.

Rayburn threw the Southern Governors Conference into a turmoil last night when he pleaded for party loyalty and also sharply criticized Republicans.

Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland, the lone Republican governor at the meeting, stalked out in the midst of Rayburn's speech. He later accused Rayburn of turning the governors' annual state dinner into "a Democratic rally of a very low order."

Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, a strong anti-Truman leader, called the speech "a partisan political talk which should never have been made" at a governors' conference.

But Gov. Sid McMath of Arkansas, a pro-Truman Democrat and a friend of the President, said: "It was a good patriotic speech by a great statesman and it was made at the right time."

Rayburn came to the conference as the main speaker. He was invited by McMath — the host governor — in an obvious move to counteract any possible move by the States' Rights leaders to use the meeting as a starting point for a "Bert Truman" campaign.

Rayburn, an old friend of the President, pleaded for party loyalty in the South regardless of who the Democratic nominee for President might be.

He defended the administration's foreign policy, its spending policy, its tax record and the record of the Democrats since former President Herbert Hoover was defeated in 1932.

Then he said that Texas never would have voted for Hoover for president in 1928 (against Catholic Al Smith) except for "prejudice and bigotry." He declared his state never would go Republican again "as long as the people can remember the Hoover days."

He also mentioned the name of Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio, avowed candidate for the GOP presidential nomination.

And then he said this country might be plunged into a panic by those who talk about the present administration thrusting the nation into bankruptcy.

With this criticism McKeldin walked out. His wife remained seated with the other governors' wives.

McKeldin later issued a statement saying he had been amazed "at the smearing of former President Hoover, an outstanding citizen of the United States."

He said his amazement turned to anger and disgust when Mr. Rayburn brought the discussion down to a ward politician's plan of who is going to lose what job if the Truman party is defeated.

Rayburn had argued that a Dixie revolt would lead to the defeat of the Democratic presidential candidate — and would be a blow to the South's prestige in congress.

The house speaker said the South would lose important committee chairmanships now held by Southerners.

Until Rayburn's speech, the conference officially had been a discussion of state problems on education, highways and public welfare. Politics was present but in the background.

Gov. Herman Talmadge of Georgia, another foe of the President, had told reporters the anti-Truman forces could organize a revolt within 48 hours. But, he added, no such drives would be launched at this conference.

On the other hand, pro-Truman forces made it clear they would challenge any move by States' Rights Democrats to split the South in next year's election.

McMath said: "I am very sorry that Governor McKeldin felt impelled to leave when the name of Herbert Hoover was mentioned. But I understand — and it apparently is as unpleasant to him as it is to the rest of us to recall the last Republican administration."

Gov. Talmadge said: "The way to avoid a split in the Democratic party is (a) not to renominat Harry Truman, (b) to eliminate the Civil Rights issue, and (c) no return to a two-thirds rule in the Democratic national convention."

Escaped Circus Bear Shot by Deer Hunters

Waldron, Nov. 13 (AP)—A trained circus bear that escaped with other wild animals when a truck overturned has been killed by deer hunters.

Sheriff Glenn Abbott said the black bear, known as "Mabel," was killed Sunday about five miles from the spot where the truck overturned October 31 and freed two leopards, two black bears, a polar bear and several monkeys.

Abbott said white hairs found near the scene led the hunters to believe the polar bear probably is in the area.

The animals owned by the Campa Bros. circus, led by a posse of several hundred officers and volunteers on a two-day hunt through the rugged, mountainous region.

The two leopards were killed, one black bear was taken alive by a circus animal trainer and three of the monkeys were found.

The day before the animals escaped a circus lion killed a young girl, the daughter of a circus performer.

Reds Make It Clear They Want to End Shooting

Munson, Korean, Nov. 13 (AP)—An Allied spokesman said Communists have made it "clear they want to end the shooting now."

The spokesman, Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckols, said this "repudiates their earlier statement" that fighting would not end until an armistice is signed. The United Nations command wants to create a cease-fire buffer zone only after other terms of an armistice are agreed on.

The Reds outlined their position in a five-hour session at Panmunjom while Allied artillery shells burst on hills less than two miles away. The white phosphorous and high explosive shells bracketed the town.

Another U. N. spokesman said the Reds complained an Allied plane violated the Panmunjom neutral area Saturday. He conceded there was some truth in the complaint.

Lt. Col. Norman B. Edwards, Allied liaison officer, said a propeller driven plane flew over the edge of the 1,000 yard security area surrounding the village, but turned away immediately.

By agreement flights over the area are prohibited except under "weather or technical conditions beyond control."

Edwards said the Communists were not trying to make this into a major incident.

He said the Communists merely asked for an explanation of this flight and the dropping of U. N. surrender leaflets into the area Sunday.

Edwards said the leaflets were dropped by an Allied plane outside the area. Some were blown by the wind, he said. This incident was considered closed.

Edwards told Communist liaison officers that the investigation of the other flight was continuing and proper disciplinary action would be taken if the situation required.

The plane was one of a flight of three which attacked hills several miles northeast of Panmunjom. Reds are entrenched northeast and south of the town. A sharp patrol skirmish broke out Monday south of the village, typical of action on the generally quiet war front.

Truce negotiators scheduled another session for 11 a. m. Wednesday 10 p. m. Tuesday, EST.

Their first hour Tuesday meeting was not broken for recess. It was the longest session since talks were resumed Oct. 25.

Lee De Vaughn, 82, Succumbs in Local Hospital

Lee De Vaughn, aged 82, a resident of Hope for about 50 years, died early today in a local hospital. He had been ill a long time.

He was a member of Woodmen of the World and was a merchant before retiring in 1949.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Travis Bowden of Hope; a brother, C. B. (Parker) Debaugh of Houston, Texas; two nephews, J. T. Bowden, Jr. of Hope and De Vaughn Bowden of Norfolk.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Thursday at the First Baptist Church by the Rev. S. A. Whitlow. Burial will be in Shover Springs Cemetery.

Two runaway youths, ages 11 and 12, were picked up by city police here last night about 7 o'clock and later sent home by bus. The youngsters were from Little Rock, Ark.

20 or More Die in Wyoming Train Crash

Evansville, Wyo., Nov. 13 (AP)—Bumbed rescue crews today continued to probe the shattered wreckage of two passenger trains in which 20 or more persons died during a snowstorm-whipped collision yesterday.

An early morning check of the morgue in this small southwestern Wyoming community showed 14 of the 20 bodies identified. Three persons are listed as missing. Eight remain in serious condition, with scores of others treated for minor hurts and released.

The city of San Francisco, site of a Union Pacific luxury train, roared out of the swirling blizzard and slammed into the rear of the halted City of Los Angeles. The collision sounded to one survivor: "Like someone screaming."

The impact crumpled portions of the two streamliners. Bodies and parts of bodies were just "lying around."

Union Pacific officials have advanced no reason for the mishap. Mainline service was restored during the night, with the City of Los Angeles, the eastbound Pony Express, headed for Denver and Kansas City.

Union Pacific officials said school buses should be back to normal by this afternoon.

The city of San Francisco, sleek UP luxury train, slammed into the rear of the halted City of Los Angeles with a roar, which sounded "like someone screaming" to one of the survivors.

The impact crumpled portions of the two modern trains into what looked like a huge tomato can squashed almost flat, with bodies and parts of bodies just "lying around."

The City of San Francisco, thundering across the snow-covered rolling desert about three miles west of this small southwestern Wyoming town, 80 miles north of Salt Lake City, it plowed through a snowstorm which had already dumped eight inches of snow on the ground.

Both were behind their schedules. The 200 odd passengers on both trains were getting ready for lunch.

Then the City of Los Angeles halted on the line for a block signal at 11:32 a. m. (MST). City of San Francisco hit the rear of the Los Angeles with a thunderous rending of metal and three unit diesel power plant.

Second train went through the car like a plowshare and crushed four other cars. All four of the on train leaped off the tracks and remained upright.

Thomas E. Sharp, owner of a radio station KTSB in San Diego, sitting in a compartment of the City of San Francisco, "Heard drinking coffee."

"The coffee flew out of my cup and the conductor flew into the room," Sharp reported. He planned that the conductor standing in the aisle outside doorway.

Alex Henetz of Cheyenne, a postal clerk, was riding in each three cars back of the Francisco power unit.

Henetz said he rushed there suddenly as a terrible and a sound like someone screaming," he said. "I guess the steel being torn apart."

Henetz said he rushed there and helped a woman from the wreck in a dazed condition who was thrown out. "I know," he said.

A Bible also was thrown from the snow beside the car. A woman picked it up. Nearby "zoom-zoom" gun," the boy said.

The snow lot up as rescue operations began. It was a heavy near the wreck; drifts were deeper.

The snow began again to fall. Workmen rigged floodlights. They continued their work in freezing temperatures.

Reports of the dead began to come out of the wreckage. The Wyoming community which was the scene of the wreck, the City of San Francisco, "Heard drinking coffee."

Charles W. Smith, the son of a Utah's Davis county, was an ambulance to the scene. "Legs and arms were lying. They had to jack up a body to get the body out one minute."

A. J. Bonham of Detroit, Mich., was with his wife in the City of San Francisco, "Heard drinking coffee."

Would Quit Atomic Bases in England

By MARVIN ARROWSMITH

Washington, Nov. 12 (AP)—Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo.) said today the United States ought to abandon any atomic bases it has in England.

The Coloradoan, a member of the Senate House Atomic Energy Committee, declared there is "no excuse for making the British people a target" for an enemy attack. He suggested American bases in the British Isles might provoke an attack.

Johnson told a reporter that in any event no consideration should be given to such bases in any study of whether this country should extend additional financial help to Great Britain.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill suggested last Friday that the U. S. give the "fullest consideration" to Britain's need for further dollar aid for her rearmament program and her limping economy. A London source said a request for about $300,000,000 in new aid would be made. Churchill presumably will press his request when he comes to Washington sometime in January to confer with President Truman.

Churchill said his nation has "every need and right to seek and receive" American help because it took peculiar risks in providing the principal atomic base for the United States in East England. The prime minister added that as a result Britain had placed itself in the very forefront of Soviet antagonism.

Johnson said, however, that the issue of additional financial assistance for the British "will have to be considered strictly on its own merits of atomic bases," he added.

Johnson indicated criticism of the socialization programs of the labor government, which Churchill's Conservative party ousted from power in the recent elections.

Over the weekend, Senator McKellar (D-Tenn.) also took a dim view of more U. S. dollar aid to Britain.

McKellar, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said this country "has been exceedingly— I might say excessively liberal—in furnishing money to Britain." He said he hopes Churchill won't seek more because "our own people have an excessive load of taxation to bear—the largest ever borne by any people."

Shivers Likely to Head Governors

Hot Springs, Nov. 12 — Texas Gov. Allan Shivers today emerged as the most likely successor to Gov. Fielding Wright, of Mississippi, as chairman of the Southern Conference of Governors.

Shivers, regarded as anti-Truman, apparently has the support of the predominant Senate Right wing of the conference organization, members of which so far had left the explosive issue of the 1952 presidential election to the more vocal pro-Truman minority.

Hon. Gov. Sid McMath, of Arkansas, and his North Carolina colleague, W. Kerr Scott, are the most ardent supporters in the group of the President for a third term.

Beer was strictly a lady's drink at one time.

Mrs. Steele Moore and family, Mr. Logan attended the Presbyterian Regional Men's Convention.

Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Bemis and children, Knox and Jessica were the Saturday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Pope Driley in Texarkana.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hollaway of Rossion were Saturday visitors in Prescott.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Leverett of Hope were the guests Saturday of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Davis.

Mrs. Jim Nelson and children were the guests of relatives in Marshall, Texas while Mr. Nelson attended the Presbyterian Regional Men's Convention that met in Dallas Friday through Sunday.

Mrs. Madge P. Burgess, Nevada County Home Demonstration Agent attended the National Home Demonstration Agent's Association Convention in Ft. Worth, Texas, last week.

Mrs. Robert Maxwell of Texarkana has been the guest of her mother, Mrs. W. O. Hays.

Mrs. Lloyd Cummings spent a part of last week in Little Rock as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Blake Crow and Mr. Crow.

UN Men Take Key Hills in Kumsong Area

By GEORGE A. McArthur

U. S. Eighth Army Headquarters, Korea, Nov. 12 (AP)—Allied troops today seized two hill positions southwest of Kumsong in an attack which pushed the Reds back three-quarters of a mile.

The Eighth Army said the attacks began at dawn, and both hills were captured by 1 p. m. The Allied infantrymen ran into light to moderate fire from a Communist position on each peak.

Kumsong is an old Red supply base, 30 miles north of the 38th parallel.

Patrols clashed sharply southwest and southeast of Kumsong Sunday. An A-100 fighter thrust northward of the hills from central front town and driven back by heavy mortar and artillery fire.

United Nations artillery pounded hills near the Panmunjom area shortly before dawn on Sunday and in another effort to isolate the Red by bombing of a buffer zone across the peninsula.

The Reds staged a series of sharp assaults on the eastern front Sunday. In the rugged region north west of the punch bowl the Communists attacked six times, twice in more than company strength.

The Eighth Army reported all the assaults were repulsed, the last one after nightfall.

Allied warplanes struck at Communist troops and supply arteries in nearly 1,000 missions Sunday. The air force reported Communist rail lines were cut in 115 places.

Two Saboteurs, parading northwest Korea, seized Redwood MIG-15 jets at a mission but the Communist pilots avoided combat.

The U. S. cruiser Toledo and Communist shore batteries had a three-hour gun duel off Hungnam, on the northeast coast. There was no damage to the warship, or casualties among its personnel.

The navy reported that fragments splattered against the ship from Communist shells falling as close as 30 yards. The Toledo and her escort, the destroyer Halsey Powell, silenced the shore guns.

Further south, the U. S. Battleship New Jersey pounded Red

Minneapolis Citizens Seek Missing Boys

Minneapolis, Nov. 13 (AP)—A frantic hunt for three small boys, missing since Saturday, today overshadowed the workaday pursuits of the more than half a million Minneapolis residents.

Kenneth Klein Jr., 8, and his two brothers, David, 6, and Daniel, 4, simply dropped from sight, leaving only wraithlike traces.

The boys left their northside home Saturday afternoon to play in a park four blocks away. The Mississippi river is only a short distance beyond.

Kenneth Klein, the boys' father, called police when they didn't come home Saturday night. A routine notice was radioed to squad care of results.

Police Chief Tom Jones Sunday called out 100 civil defense auxiliary police to aid his reserves in one of the city's greatest manhunts. The volunteers combed the area for miles around the Klein home. They searched alleys, rang doorbells, found nothing.

One resident reported seeing three small boys resembling Kenneth, David and Daniel sitting on a curbstone late Saturday. A tracking dog was taken to the spot. The dog followed a trail to the river bank. There the scent stopped.

Police cars carrying loud speakers patrolled the fringes of swampland to blare out the boys' names. No answer.

Squads plodded through warehouses of the river industrial district. Hollow echoes answered their shouts. Only machinery instead of little boys' eyes reflected the flashlight beams. Truck parts were also scanned to no avail.

Yesterday, three civil air patrol planes circled over the Mississippi but again no clues to Kenneth, David and Daniel. A police launch towing dragnets turned up only waterlogged wood.

"It just doesn't seem reasonable those youngsters could disappear in the midst of thousands of people," said Chief Jones. "It isn't in the books, either, that all three of them would tumble into the river together. But that's what it looks like now."

The current at the spot reached by the dogs is very swift, he pointed out—it would carry 'em away awful quick."

Capt. Kenneth Morre of the northside police, said he wasn't giving up yet. He has ordered a box car by box car search of nearby railroad yards. And he planned an alert to rail men for a look at cars pulled from the yards for outgoing trains.

The motorboat and the dragnets were ordered back onto the river today.

Eden Urges Reds to Try for Peace

Paris, Nov. 12 (AP)—Britain's Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden called on the Russians today to put aside major world issues temporarily and seek a step-by-step solution to the cold war.

"Let us grasp the definite and limited problems, and work for their practical solution," Eden said in a conciliatory speech before the United Nations general assembly.

"That is the real road to peace. That is the way to make a fresh start," he declared.

Eden's speech, his first in the U. N. since the founding conference at San Francisco in 1945, was notable for its mild tone and lack of attacks on the Russians.

He urged all U. N. members — including the Soviet Union — to work from the small issues to the great "with real good will."

Backing up U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson's policy statement last week on every point, Eden cited the British-French-American disarmament proposals as one example of how the east-west disputants could work from the small issues to the large.

"We suggest," he declared, that disarmament "should begin with the less important categories of the armed forces and armaments, their great. Steady pursuit, with a fixed move on to those that are more important and secret, and therefore more difficult to handle."

"The sooner we can agree on the simpler categories, the sooner we shall have confidence to tackle more complex tasks."

Eden appealed to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky to reconsider his scornful rejection of the western proposals. The Russian had submitted, instead, his own disarmament plan calling for a world arms conference.

Eden also urged, as Acheson had before him, that agreement be reached to:

1. End the war in Korea;
2. Reunite Germany through free democratic elections;
3. Give Austria a treaty ending the occupation by France, Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States;
4. Admit Italy to the United Nations.

Eden implied that the time was not yet ripe for a conference of President Truman, Prime Minister Churchill, Marshal Stalin and French Premier Rene Pleven, as French President Vincent Auriol suggested last week.

First, the foreign secretary told the assembly, the climate must be created through sincere attempts to settle limited problems "in which the kind of moving appeal which Monsieur Auriol made to us xxx can meet its full response."

"Preparation, conference and agreement; that should be the order of our endeavor. Starting from the small issues and working to the great. Steady pursuit, with a fixed determination — and with real good will," he said.

Eden's speech took on added significance by being the first policy outline put before the U. N. by Churchill's new conservative gov-

Criticism Hurt His Army Son, Father Fears

Glenwood Springs, Colo., Nov. 12 (AP)—Eugene R. Guild, a retired World War One army captain, said today he fears his criticism of administration policy was responsible for his son's not receiving the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The Glenwood Springs rancher, who served in China and the Philippines, said he wrote President Truman Nov. 1. He asked if President Truman's failure to award the medal to his dead son was a "reproach against those who criticize you."

"No comment," Presidential Press Secretary Joseph Short said last night in Key West, Fla., where the President is vacationing.

In his letter to Mr. Truman, Guild said his son, 25-year-old Marine Lt. John Guild, and another officer, Lt. Henry Alfred Commiskey, fought side by side during a battle for Hill 85 near Inchon in Korea. Commiskey survived and was awarded the medal of honor — the nation's highest military award. Guild died Sept. 20, 1950, and a Navy Cross was posthumously awarded.

Guild, in releasing his letter to reporters late Saturday, emphasized that he is not challenging Lt. Commiskey's right to the medal.

The letter said, in part: "This is to ask you about evidences of political tampering with awards for the heroism of our fighting men in Korea."

"In the now famous capture of Hill 85 near Inchon, two young Marines led their attacking platoons through a barrage of fire x x x. One boy killed seven of the enemy and remained unscathed. The other boy, well out in front of his men, killed two of the enemy and was fatally wounded."

"Marine corps eyewitnesses, deciding that each of the boys had exhibited the same degree of heroism, recommended to higher authorities the same award for each boy — the Navy Cross."

"Some time later," the letter continued, "the father of the dead boy severely criticized the President for his battlefield appointment which shackled the hands of American fighting men, and had killed his son and thousands of others."

"Subsequently, when the decorations were awarded, the boy whose father publicly criticized the President, received the Navy Cross and the other was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor."

Guild, in the letter, said he had criticized administration policy by calling for the bombing of Communist supply lines in Korea; using the atom bomb; opposing the draft; and complaining of official refusal to permit his son's gravestone in Arlington cemetery to bear the inscription, "Killed in Korea."

Guild charged in a letter to Sen. Ed Johnson (D-Colo.) in August that refusal of the Quartermaster General to permit the inscription, "Killed in Korea," was an "insult."

The letter told control of the British government soon after the U. N. came into existence; they did not regain power until late last month.

DOROTHY DIX Unappreciative Wife

Dear Miss Dix: Thirteen years ago, at the age of 18, I married to get away from intolerable conditions at home caused by my stepfather. Now I have a nice home, four lovely children and a husband who is a good provider and a wonderful father. There is just one thing lacking — I've never had the love, affection and romance that goes with marriage (before and after). I try to drown my sorrow in taking more interest in the children, getting out with people and going places, but my heart loses out. My husband never tells me the little things a woman longs to hear nor shows me affection; he just takes me for granted. I go out of my way to do nice special things for him hoping for a word of appreciation, but it's no use. I don't want to give up what I have but it's hard to realize that life is passing on and I'm still young. I'm fond of my husband but I can't consider his love.

CAMILLE D.
Answer: What is your husband's side of the story, Camille? When you wanted to escape from intolerable home conditions, as you call them, he was ready to marry you. He has given you thirteen years of devotion and fidelity, providing a good home, being a good father. In return he has never had your love. Don't you think he has cause for complaint? You want from him what you have never been willing to give. Is that fair?

Don't Blame Him
I should say you have got far more from your marriage than you have put into it. You can't blame your husband because you missed the romance which rightly belonged to your teenage years. That's general to permit the words "Korean war" or "killed in Korea" on the gravestones of men killed in the war.

The quartermaster general notified him, Guild said, that regulations forbade the engraving of "Korean war" on the headstone of his son but that the word "Korea" would be placed at the rear of the headstone or beneath the official inscription if "I wanted to pay for it."

"Although I believe my son deserved no more than he received," the letter to President Truman continued, "there are indications of intent to discriminate against him. I think there was some funny business somewhere and that the matter should be cleared up by being brought to public notice."

"Was this 'special arrangement' use of the Medal of Honor in the case of two boys recommended for a lower reward a reprisal? Reprisals against those who criticize you and your associates are not unknown, Mr. President."

Guild told reporters that what he had in mind "is to guard our symbols of heroic sacrifice from abuse."

is one of the penalties being meted at 18 entails — and one of the reasons I discouraged such marriages.

You have the most precious gift a woman can get from wedlock. The protection and security of a good husband and home far outweighs the advantages of demonstrative affection. With four youngsters in the house you certainly do not want for love, and I'm sure your husband loves you dearly, even though he makes no outward show of his feelings.

Learn to accept your blessings and be truly thankful for them. Yours are many! Perhaps a glance at the other side of life may convince you. Why not try a little welfare work among neglected children in your town? A glimpse into the lives of women much less fortunate than you will send you scurrying back to your own pleasant home, secure in the knowledge that your life has been cast in sunny places.

Dear Miss Dix: I am 16 years old and go with a boy 22. He is very nice but he always wants to tell me what to do and I don't like it. He wants to marry me when I am 17. Should I agree?

S. F.
Answer: If you and your friend have difficulty getting along now, imagine what marriage will do to the situation. Of course you're too young to be going steady at all, and in view of your boy friend's odd disposition you shouldn't be going steady with him. Why not scout around and find some one who isn't bossy? The odds you get now, remember, are just a drop in the bucket compared to what you'll have to take after the wedding.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm a widow in the late sixties and have a son 35. He is a fine boy. We lived in a cottage for fifteen years. It was sold, so we were obliged to move to an apartment with three other families. Two of them keep us awake nights, sometimes as late as three in the morning. My son says if I complain they will only be worse. I don't mind noise if they would only stop at twelve.

MRS. M.
Answer: Most people are really basically kind, and I'm sure if you tell these folks how much they disturb your rest they will extend more consideration. If not, complain to your landlord. Many localities have ordinances against excessive noise at night; perhaps you live in one of them.

VICKI'S

Low-Down on a high-powered Performer

Let us tell you this:
The Buick pictured here packs more power than you find in any other car of its size and room and price.

That's the power of Buick's newest high-compression valve-in-head eight—the F-263 Fireball Engine, that really gets miles from a gallon of gas.

Add to this the fact that it tips the scales at 3817 pounds curb-side—and you begin to see why this big-powered beauty is such a nimble-footed number out on the road.

But that's only Chapter I of the performance story.

There's a big-car feel to the way this trim traveler covers the ground—hugs the curves—holds its course on the straightaway—smoothes the bumps with its big soft coil springs on all four wheels.

There's big-car room inside—six-passenger room—headroom, hiproom, shoulderroom, kneeroom, front and back.

Come in, look it over, and we think you'll agree—it's big in everything but price.

And that's where it really shines. If you've shopped around you'll know what we mean when you read the price tags, and what they include in the way of standard equipment that shows up as "extras" on so many others. Such things as an oil filter, air cleaner, vacuum booster, built-in summer ventilation are all yours at no extra charge.

It's hard to believe but it's true. If you can afford a new car, you can afford this Buick at the prices we're quoting today.

Better come in and look this smart buy over.

Equipment, accessories, trim and models are subject to change without notice. *Optional on Wildcat, Buick, optional at extra cost on other Buicks.

Argentina Again 'Elects' Juan D. Peron

Buenos Aires, Nov. 12 (AP) — Argentina has elected President Juan D. Peron to another six-year term in a record-breaking election which gave him a thumping majority over his main opponent.

Peron's chief opponent, the Radical party, conceded his overwhelming victory on the basis of government figures and unofficial incomplete returns from yesterday's election.

With about one-third of the votes counted, the interior ministry announced early today that Peron had a total of 1,041,141 votes to 722,234 for Dr. Ricardo Balbin, radical party candidate.

The pro-government press hailed Peron's victory as a vote of confidence by the people. It said his final majority will be bigger than in his first election in 1946 when he polled 55 per cent.

Radical leaders declared that women, voting for the first time in an Argentine general election, were the main instrument in the victory.

The opposition claimed there had been some irregularities in the voting. They said that, according to their own count, at least five and possibly seven of the candidates won congressional seats in the capital, which sends 29 deputies to congress.

There were no other opposition complaints of irregularities, but radical leaders reiterated charges that the Peronists defrauded them by not permitting the opposition to campaign in the facilities.

Reports by the interior ministry that the information undersecretary gave the list of the way of congressional elections were being given, they also omitted the number of votes cast for the Communist, Socialist, Conservative and other minor parties.

Peron in one of his pre-election speeches ordered his followers to vote for the full return of Peron's candidates to give him strong support in congress.

A record number of voters — probably 6,000,000 — showed up at the polls, with women outnumbering the men. Forty-seven women, all Peronistas, are seeking election to the house of deputies (congress).

Senora Eva Peron, wife of the president, heads the powerful Peronista women's party.

No complete figures on the total vote were available yet, but the interior ministry said more than 80 per cent of the eligible voters in the capital cast ballots yesterday, despite the heaviest downpour in years which disrupted communications.

A five-hour rainfall in Buenos Aires delayed the reporting of results from outlying districts of the capital. The communications breakdown forced the election court in

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

AT THIS particular spot where Mollie and Nicholas were trying to cross the street, it could take as long as five minutes to find a gap in the evening traffic.

"From the first mention of his name," she said crossly, "you began to hold against Peter what ever it was that you had against his father."

"And that wasn't fair!" "The crowd the night of the election," Mollie said, "it wasn't fair. Peter's a nice kid. There's an innocence and naivete about him."

"Oh, no!" "But there is, Nicholas. And it's not something to laugh at."

"I guess you're right, darling. Here's the mayor's limousine. It that hits us."

"I know. We'll get a magnificent funeral," she was laughing when they reached the "limo." Here they were waiting only on the right.

"But in a green limo, Mollie?" Nicholas continued as if there had been no break. "How did it get here?"

"He's twenty-seven. Why don't you wear gloves?" "Twenty-seven? A lot older than I thought, but that makes me hate a lot more interesting."

"It isn't interesting, it's just rather wonderful, in the world of today. He lives everywhere and expects them to like him."

"Don't they?" "You don't." "Well, that would surely frighten anyone's life. Here we go. I left my gloves at my house."

"You did not. I'd have found them." He studied her face. "Hazel found them. Tell me more about Peter and his need for help. Though it's obvious he doesn't need it, with you on his side."

"I haven't done anything but help him get out of Clara Wayne's house."

"Did she object to his moving?" "Of course not. But—"

She looked out at the night and stated Nicholas' hotel, beginning to sing. She was looking over her shoulder at the two tall young people who stood in the shadows of the hotel entrance. "Were they quarreling?" she asked, her voice lowered.

"It looked more like she was threatening him. Risky business—Ragade's definitely put."

"Oh, Nicholas!" "He's sure in. Haven't you suspected it?"

"I only know him in the hospital—his very good."

"No sign of disturbance? There could be a bad business for a very good doctor to have a wife like that."

Mollie stopped again to turn and look back at the white-faced young people still talking as if they were alone on the busy boulevard.

"What kind of wife do you mean, Nicholas?" "The answer was rough. "Two-faced," was his grating epithet.

"You mean he's dangerous?" "I mean your friend Clara is being duped on her first love."

"I wonder if she knows it. Peter said she wouldn't talk about the matter."

"You can't leave Peter out of anything." "You say," said Mollie, resuming her way along the sidewalk.

"You know, I suppose," said Mollie, after an interval during which she eyes again searched for the car that Clara had a down on Peter, she could extend it to you."

"I can handle any damn thing you throw against me," Mollie spoke softly.

"Remember, do you feel that moving Shepherd into an apartment in all he needs to fix him up?"

"I wish you knew him, Nicholas." "I do know him."

"He's a very nice chap." "He's a very hard-core woman."

"But, don't you see? That's what I mean. He has every one of the qualities to put him on the spot in a big organization like the Group. His good-looking, he has charm and genuine medical ability."

"Then why do you think he could help me?" "Well, he does not have the common sense, mean nature necessary to do what you're doing. The jealousy that is rampant in a big hospital."

"And do you know what?" "That you don't care. But, Nicholas—" "I want you to go into my mouth, young man. I was going to say that your father-in-law is due to learn the things he needs."

"No, no," she said crossly. "You're not going to do your old job of belittling Peter to me."

"What in the devil are you talking about?" "Mollie was angry and too close to tears to be comfortable. She had quarreled with Nicholas before, but never had known this crosswise feeling of irritation, of compulsion to say all the wrong things—

"You make fun of everything that is simple and well. I like Peter Shepherd, and I mean to help him if I can."

"I truly hope you don't get caught in the revolving door."

"I won't. And he does need a little interest."

"In that why you think you're in love with him?" "That was your idea."

"Yes," he agreed, after a second's thought. "I was. But, you know? I wouldn't have said Shepherd was a man to pick the maternal type of woman, Mollie. Not from the girls I've seen him around with."

"His eyes watched her alertly. "Present company excepted," he added softly.

"I suppose you mean to be especially nasty?" "Yes, indeed! As nasty as I am able! But tell me, if you know, how does Peter feel about your managing his affairs?"

"I'm not..." "You've been furnishing an apartment for him, down to the out on the rug? If he asked you to do all that, he's wrong you. If he doesn't..."

Mollie stopped dead to stare at him. He grinned with delight and seized her arm. "Thank you, Mollie. I feel much better now. And while it's here, let's get across this street. What's going on here, anyway? A parade?"

"Yes, they have one every evening at this time. Look, Nicholas..."

"Can't. I'm watching traffic." She looked at him in despair. "Please, Nicholas... Let me tell you this one example of the sort of thing that Peter runs into, so you'll see—Do you know Dr. Butcher?"

"Yes. He should change his name. It's a handicap."

"Oh, Nicholas, listen to me!" "I'm listening, Mollie. Only why should Butcher get into this?"

"You know he's allowed Group courtesy?" "He shouldn't be. His name is a handicap because it fits."

He grabbed Mollie's arm, and raced her across the avenue. "What's he done now?"

Mollie stood where she was on the curb. "Either you shut up and listen to me, or go home that way!" Her finger pointed toward the Park.

"O. K. I choose to listen." Nicholas stood waiting, puffing on his pipe, relaxed, half-smiling, his eyes on her face. She drew a deep breath.

Taft to Keep Clear of Coming Battle

Washington, Nov. 12 (AP) — Supporters indicated today Senator Taft (R-Ohio) will keep clear of an impending battle for control of Pennsylvania's 70-vote delegation in next year's GOP presidential nomination convention.

Although Taft's backers believe he can gain some support among these delegates in his bid for top spot on the ticket, they said that such plans are changed in name will not be entered in the state's Nov. 22 presidential primary.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) served notice yesterday that there is going to be "freely of action in Pennsylvania at the proper time" in behalf of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, he wouldn't say, however, whether the general's name will go in the primary, when it could be entered without any action on the part of the candidate.

Taft has been proclaiming that Eisenhower is a Republican and will be available for that party's nomination. However, Senator Edward Martin (R-Pa.) told reporters at a Harrisburg meeting also attended by Taft he doubts that Eisenhower will run.

"I don't think he will want to give up his job in Europe," Martin said.

The apparently represents the viewpoint of a faction headed by G. M. C. (R-Pa.), Republican national committeeman, and may also be the view of Gov. John S. Pine.

Pine was elected with Taft's help in a battle with the long-dominant state organization headed by former U. S. Senator Joseph R. Grundy.

Taft apparently is doubtful that the movement will go along with him in his draft-Eisenhower campaign. Taft is known to have told friends if Pine wants a fight over control of the delegation, he can have it.

This potential warfare in Taft's backyard is regarded as something of a serious threat to the drive by Eisenhower forces to get the general into the race and to get him nominated.

The potential's roots had been counting on New York and Pennsylvania as the keystone of their strength. Taft's camp has very little hope of breaking into the New York delegation, controlled by Gov.

Deputy Sheriff Kills Man, Himself

Atlanta, Nov. 13 (AP) — A sheriff's deputy fired six shots last night and ended two lives — his own and that of a 23-year-old basketball coach.

The dead, W. D. Martin, 28-year-old Fulton county deputy and James R. Phillips, high school teacher and coach at Alpharetta, a community of less than 1,000 about 27 miles northeast of Atlanta.

Lieut. H. B. Carroll of the Fulton county police said officers were unable to find an immediate reason for the shooting.

Carroll said it happened like this: Phillips, who had gone to the high school gymnasium to direct the basketball team in practice, was called outside by Martin.

The deputy fired once. The shot struck the young coach in the neck and knocked him down. Martin then fired four more shots into the coach's body.

Two players on the basketball team — Carroll Shirley and H. H. Padden rushed to the gym door, but the deputy menaced them with his revolver and ordered them to remain inside.

Martin stepped back a few paces, placed the barrel of the gun against his head, and fired.

Both men were married. Phillips had taught and coached at the school for the past two years. Officers said Mrs. Martin also was a teacher at the school.

Skilled Surgeons Chinese surgeons can perform very delicate operations since they have fine, delicate hands. An eminent oculist says their dexterity probably is the result of the Chinese habit of eating with chopsticks.

Thomas E. Dewey. But the senator's backers think they might benefit by a scrap in Pennsylvania in which they plan to take no public part. Taft speaks in Harrisburg tonight but is not expected to make any plea for delegates.

Pennsylvania is one of a dozen states where the situation is so much up in the air that majority party officials are awaiting developments before they cast their lot publicly with any candidate.

Included in this category are many party officials in such states as Idaho, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Virginia, Washington and Wyoming.

co. Denham's wife suffered a bruised leg. Denham, not hurt, said "There was not a lot of screaming. It was rather quiet for such a terrible wreck."

A freight train, standing on a spur beside the main line when the crash occurred, was jammed by the collision. Several of its cars overturned.

Assistance was summoned to the crash from as far away as Salt Lake City. One from Hill air force base near Ogden, Utah, crashed into a rock cliff about 30 miles from the wreck scene. No one was injured.

Two hours after the wreck, two Union Pacific freights collided north of Laramie, Wyo. No reports of injuries were received.

A rush call went out to Evanston and Ogden for cutting torches to free the twisted metal and the trapped injured, dead and dying. Later diesel oil began to leak, and the torches had to be put out and the tedious hacking done with steel saws. All the dead passengers were taken aboard the City of Los Angeles.

Bodies were taken, as they were retrieved, to an improvised morgue at Evanston city hall. The most seriously injured were taken to Evanston's only hospital, Unity Memorial. Those suffering minor hurts were treated at the American Legion hall.

A large number of physicians were aboard the two trains, returning from a medical convention in San Francisco. They assisted local doctors in administering to the injured. Dr. Anthony F. Ippolito, prominent orthopedic surgeon, was killed in the wreck with his wife. He was a speaker at the American College of Surgeons convention.

Dr. Ippolito was a graduate of Purdue university, and starred as a fullback on their 1937-38 teams. He then joined the Chicago Bears professional team and played the 1943 season as a guard.

After the wreck, those who were only slightly hurt, and the curious, who came from miles around, stood awkwardly about the wreck which paralleled the tracks and the highway, some 200 yards away. They were shocked; their descriptions of the scene vivid.

Ivan Eggers, Evanston police chief, said it was just a mass of tangled iron and steel. Cars are off the track all up and down the line. It's the worst accident I've ever seen."

J. F. Boyd of Chicago, a porter and veteran of 30 years of rail-roading during which he has been involved in four wrecks: "This is the worst one I've ever seen."

Clark Lobb, reporter for the Salt Lake Tribune: "The cars resembled toys. The wreckage was unbelievable."

Sgt. Jack Gridley, chief of staff of the Utah highway patrol: "The worst wreck I've seen in 15 years of law enforcement work."

Survivors were taken by bus to Evanston where they were transferred to another eastbound train. Union Pacific officials said traffic would be routed around the wreck scene by way of McCammon, Idaho. East-west UP tracks are joined there by the line's north-south road between Salt Lake City and Butte, Mont.

convention. During the depression years, Revilla made a sarcastic reference to that great engineer, Heriberto Hoover.

McKenna later told reporters when they began to sneer Hoover, "I knew it was going to be a Democratic rally of a very low order."

He added: "Those huns are going to be defeated."

McKenna's formal statement explaining his outlook said: "Through no fault of the members of the Southern Governors' Conference the state dinner to-night degenerated into a political rally—and to a rally on the better type."

"My first reaction to the speech of Speaker Rayburn was amazement at the sneering of former President Hoover, an outstanding citizen of the United States."

"Amazement turned to anger and disgust when Mr. Rayburn began at the dinner-table down to a vulgar politician's plan of who was going to lose what job if the Republican party is defeated."

"My action should not be interpreted as criticism of the conference or of any of its members. I am proud to be a member of the conference."

"But I am sure I was out of place in Mr. Rayburn's special political rally."

could extend to April, 1952. He had requested the leave to show Argentina and foreigners he would not actually influence the voters.

Peron had indicated he would return to his duties right after the election but it is now reported he has postponed his return to be near his sick wife, who underwent a major operation on Nov. 6.

Argentine officials have not revealed the nature of Senora Peron's illness, but she is believed to have a severe heart ailment.

Senora Peron was regarded as a key factor in Peron's victory. It was largely through her suffragist efforts that women were allowed to vote.

Acting President Alberto Tessera today reinstated the internal law, which was lifted during election day.

The law was passed after the abortive Sept. 28 military uprising for which hundreds of Argentine army officers have been sentenced to prison terms or dismissed from the service.

Some 70,000 army, navy and air force men, who kept order yesterday, will continue to guard the ballot boxes until the final counting which starts Thursday and lasts about 10 days.

Parts of 6 Divisions Enroute to Europe

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 13 (AP) — Elements of the last of six American divisions assigned to the European army under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower are on their way today.

A transport left the Hampton Roads port of embarkation yesterday with several hundred members of the 28th Infantry Division, former Pennsylvania National Guard outfit.

The troops went aboard shortly after they arrived by train from Camp Atterbury, Ind., where they were in training 14 months. Only a small group of relatives and soldiers was on hand.

Before they boarded their ship, the soldiers paraded across the pier and stopped for a few minutes for coffee and doughnuts.

Taft Predicts Victory for Himself

Dixton, O., Nov. 13 (AP) — Sen. Robert A. Taft last night predicted he would win the Republican nomination for President on a very early ballot at the July convention.

"He made the statement in an interview with a newspaper."

Taft declined to discuss the possible candidacy of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

He attacked the Brannan farm subsidy plan as a "political fraud," warned that government direction of farms will lead to stagnation; defended his vote for a law imposing a tax on the undistributed income of farm cooperatives; and called the principle of farm cooperatives "a principle I can defend on every rostrum in the nation."

Peron Assured Full Support

Buenos Aires, Nov. 13 (AP) — Juan D. Peron is apparently assured the almost unanimous support of Argentina's federal congress and 14 provincial governors during his next term — 1952 to 1956 — as the nation's president.

Provisional but almost complete unofficial results from Sunday's elections showed that Peronista candidates swept the board for the argent senate and took all 14 provincial governorships.

The government forces also were assured complete control of the lower congressional chamber, the house of deputies.
